Alaska National Guard launches new website

JOINT BASE ELMENDORF-RICHARDSON, Alaska — The Alaska National Guard launched its new public website today, joining the Department of Defense's initiative to standardize and merge web content across all DoD organizations into a standardized web platform. The new website at ak.ng.mil implements a more user friendly, intuitive interface while providing a host of enhanced features designed to improve user experience.

The new website's enhanced features include a modern, cleaner look and display of content; easily identifiable links to the organization's social media platforms; expanded technology capabilities, including videos and RSS feeds; dynamic content delivering the latest news and photos from across the various units of the Alaska National Guard; and a host of resources for our Soldiers and Airmen to be able to access.

The website will continue to grow and evolve as new content is added, and will be in place to bring to the web the most current information available to the Alaska National Guard's members and to the community they serve.
